Often I find myself frantically busy all day long, pecking at one task after another. By the end of the day, I would have nothing substantial accomplished and very little to show for my efforts. Making Moments Matter helped me identify and prioritize what is important. Stay on task, and, most importantly, have a sense of accomplishment by the end of the day. As Larry says, it is not about "time management", it's about making the most of your life. Time is the only true absolute. How we use it is what sets us apart in both business and life. Making Moments Matter has helped me make better use of my time, absolutely.

In your personal and professional life, there are few lessons that are more important than those that help you control the resource of time. The skills and awareness that you can learn from Making Moments Matter will make the difference between "never having enough time" and having a systematic approach to allocating your time to accomplish what is important to you, your family and your career.
